

It started with a vision and a gift of land.

South Texans began the crusade for a teachers' college more than 100 years ago, committed to the ideals of higher education, and spurred on by the King Ranch. Now Texas A&M University-Kingsville is the oldest public university south of Austin, building on a decade of historic growth while steadfast in its mission "to enrich lives through education, discovery and service in South Texas and beyond."

The Texas A&M University-Kingsville Foundation is working not only to sustain this growth, but to ensure this momentum for a limitless future. With more than $75 million invested, the Foundation Trustees enjoy a strong partnership with STMM in providing oversight of the university's private support.

Student enrollment recently hit an all-time high, making scholarships as vital as ever. Research activity is at record levels, and endowments are key for renowned programs including the Caesar Kleberg Wildlife Research Institute, the King Ranch Institute for Ranch Management, natural gas engineering, and the Citrus Center.

But perhaps the Foundation's greatest measure of success is being prominently ranked* for social mobility – a measure of how a university receives students from low-income backgrounds and graduates them into promising careers. Upon graduation, their lives and families have changed forever.

"It has been both our honor and pleasure to work with the Texas A&M University-Kingsville Foundation. The hard work and focus of their Investment Committee is a testament to the deep-seated love they have for the university," said Jeanie Wyatt, CFA, CEO and Chief Investment Officer of STMM.

The Texas A&M University-Kingsville Foundation has set its sights on strengthening donor support by launching "With You. Without Limits." – the most ambitious, comprehensive campaign in university history. With you, the future of South Texas and beyond is Without Limits.
